With great honor and great academic responsibility, I would like to present the inaugural issue of Journal of Biomolecules, Pathogenesis and Therapeutics which is written as "JBPT" by initials and "J Biomol Pathog Ther" by abbreviation. JBPT holds significance as a peer-reviewed, open access, multidisciplinary research and healthcare journal to publish quality research in the broad spectrum of molecular biology, disease pathogenesis and therapeutic sciences.

JBPT as a platform of well-defined scope aims to promote cross-disciplinary communication between scientists, clinicians, and academicians with newest trends by releasing original researches, narrative reviews, systematic reviews, meta-analyses, case reports, Clinical Audits and other scholarly articles. It ensures methodological rigor, ethical research and relevance to fundamental scientific and translational medical sciences.

Our editorial and peer review process is guided by internationally accepted codes and principles of ethical behaviors and adhere to best practices in academic publications. To maintain authenticity that promotes justice, openness and institutional honesty, all submissions are subjected to double-blind peer review. The Editorial Board consists of well-informed national and international academicians who will preserve the quality and credibility of the journal in terms of its scientific content and leading it towards international indexing.

This inaugural issue is the embodiment of the dedication of the authors, reviewers and the editorial staff who dedicated their time and expertise regardless of the challenges that come with the pioneering nature of a new academic journal. We are strengthening the organogram and making management related things better gradually in order to publish the coming issues with regular timeline and best possible frequency. In the future years, we are eager to make JBPT one of the best forums that encourage innovation, critical thinking, and ethical research practices. Authors are warmly invited to be part of the journal as researchers, reviewers and readers. Student's Corner section will also be planned to encourage their skills and confidence during studies.

JBPT will continue to grow and thrive due to positive feedback and academic collaboration. It is my honor as the representative of the Editorial Board to express gratitude to all the contributors and stakeholders who put in efforts and supported the work. From 2026, further issues will be dedicated to advancing the idea of scientific knowledge.
